Anshu- Everest Calling -Synopsis:

This documentary traces the dream of a simple housewife and mother of two and the pitfalls she faced on her quest. Despite the adversities mostly caused by nature, she held on her own and came out triumphant. Today, Anshu Jemshempa needs no introduction as she has already carved her name alongside the majestic Mt. Everest. Having scaled it twice, she endeavored to repeat it for the third time but nature had other plans. Despite the life threatening setback, she embarked on her fourth attempt only to be thwarted again by nature. However, Anshu is not one to be bogged down by disappointments and has again started harnessing her mountaineering skills for another tryst with Everest.

'Everest Calling' salutes the endearing spirit of a true mountaineer for whom Everest is the love of her life.

A 157 - Synopsis:

Peace and equality are poems expressing certain dreams of nations; but the literature of peace and equality seekers hasn't succeeded so far and the situation is taking a turn for the worse. War, genocide, discrimination and rape are becoming widespread and global. In the past century, the accumulated time during which the world has been pure of war has been less than an hour. And that is a fact we must face. Why all this criticism and ado have been so futile and fruitless? What is the problem of these self-proclaimed righteous uprisings that they all tend to dry? A157 is a filmmaker look at three pregnant girls recounting their stories of war, violence and sexist conquest in a land where people have no more dreams...
